The accreditation has been awarded on the basis of an assessment and pursuant to the agreement concluded with the accreditation body with respect to the accreditation of a certification body in accordance with the rules and procedures of the German Accreditation System, in conformity with the standards DIN EN ISO/IEC 17021 and DIN EN ISO 17011.

Any modifications are to be made in writing.

The accreditation is awarded subject to revocation at any time due to the lapse of any conditions defined in the contract and in the annex to this accreditation certificate.

The scope of the accreditation defined in the annex and listed in the directory of accredited bodies is subject to change and modification. Validity, current extent of the accreditation and registration number are documented in the central database of the DAR (<http://dar.bam.de>) (and optional – published on the website of the accreditation body).

This certificate becomes invalid at the time of deletion from the directory.

The certification body can use the DAR Logo under the predetermined conditions.

Accreditation certificates and annexes are not to be disseminated in any form other than the present one. The publication of extracts is subject to approval by the accreditation body. The impression shall not be given that the certification service also extends to such areas of service of the certificate holder which are not definitively covered by the accreditation. If such an impression is given, the accreditation body is entitled to demand respective changes. In case references are made concerning the accreditation within the DAR system, the covered area has to be clearly stated.
